

The author of international seller, Lessons from the Lakeside brings us,
The Canvas - A Secret from the Holocaust

Eveline calls English the language of her thoughts. French, however, is the one she spoke until her education in the USA began. This romance vernacular gives texture and nuances to her prose.

She writes with a voice that finds its reason in the heart of humanity.

The Canvas – A Secret from the Holocaust is a novel of emotions, feelings and mystery. One reads it with tension, expecting a tour-de-force ending, which Eveline Horelle Dailey delivers. With the horror of the Holocaust in the background, The Canvas is full of insights into a young girl's growing up with memories of love and finding the answers to her roots.

Even though the book is subtitled "A Secret from the Holocaust", I was caught off guard by the ending. When you discover the "secret" and then review in your mind the sequences of events, one feels even more of the devastating emotional trauma. Eveline Horelle Dailey weaves throughout her novel The canvas, just as in the previous book Lessons from the Lakeside, perceptions of how the strands of our experiences are interlaced to form our own life canvas.

I have read and reread the manuscript. I know that our meeting was orchestrated by the Holocaust souls to implore upon you and me to keep their voices alive. I found the story to be breath taking, hauntingly beautiful, and frightening. I am amazed at the research, accuracy as well as acumen. Your book is a must read as unfortunately there are persons who do not believe the Holocaust happened. Truth is stranger than fiction you get right into the face of your readers.
