Short Synopsis

At twelve Leila from Iran gives birth to a girl, a gust of wind gives her a chance to escape immolation by her husband. Saadia, eleven from Afghanistan has a stillborn son; she is returned to her father. Dishonored, the recourse is to stone her to death.

Independently, American military forces rescue each girl and they escape horrific deaths.

Brought to the USA by a non-governmental agency, a young widow from Maine adopts them. They learn language and alphabet. Once literate they continue on to higher education.

No longer enslaved by the effects of ignorance, sexual, physical and mental abuse the girls find determination and self-assurance. Transformed, creative, and actualized, their human spirit awakens with the active desire to change and make right some wrongs.

The Drum Made from the Skin of my Sisters enriches, educates and captivates the heart of a reader. It provokes our thinking process.
